The Association of American Indian Physicians (AAIP) National Native American Youth Initiative

The Association of American Indian Physicians (AAIP) is now accepting applications for the ninth annual National Native American Youth Initiative (NNAYI), which will be held, in Washington, D.C. More than 60 Native American high school students age 16 - 18 will be awarded full scholarships to attend this weeklong intensive academic enrichment program held each summer in the nation's capital.

"NNAYI is a tremendous opportunity for Native American high school students interested in pursuing a career in health," says Margaret Knight, AAIP's Executive Director. "NNAYI's curriculum is strategically designed to prepare students for admission to college and professional schools, as well as for careers in health and biomedical research."

During interactive workshops, students increase their skills in leadership, communication, studying and testing, assertiveness, networking, professional behavior, interactive learning, and time management. AAIP member physicians and health professionals serve as role models for the students and offer insights into their respective health fields, including medicine, pharmacy, dentistry, public and allied health, veterinary medicine, biomedical research, and more. Students also learn about opportunities for mentoring and shadowing with AAIP member physicians.

Native American high school students age 16 - 18 that have an interest in pursuing a health profession are eligible to apply. Students must have a minimum cumulative 2.5 grade point average (A = 4.0). Lodging, meals, and travel expenses are provided for each student accepted for the weeklong program.

To accompany the students during the program, NNAYI is currently accepting application for 12 counselors to serve as chaperones during the visit to Washington, D.C. Native American college students age 21 and older that currently are enrolled in health programs are encouraged to apply. Counselors receive all expenses paid, as well as a stipend at the end of the program. The application should be available in November 2012.

Full scholarships to selective college summer programs: QuestBridge will provide counseling to 10 students to support their applications to summer school programs at Harvard University, Stanford University, the University of Notre Dame, or Yale University. If accepted, students will receive a scholarship covering tuition, room and board.

College admissions counseling: QuestBridge will offer individualized assistance with college admissions and the financial aid process to 50 students.

College preparatory conferences: Approximately 800 applicants will be selected to attend one of Quest Bridge's four college preparatory conferences at top-ranked colleges nationwide in the summer of 2007. Conferences will feature workshops on selecting colleges, application strategies, and financial aid. The application will be available on the QuestBridge website (www.questbridge.org) starting on February 2017.

The application and awards are free of charge. For more information, please visit their website at www.questbridge.org.
